Sheriff struggling to anticipate expenses

New jail completion pushed back

BY BOB DEMAREE

As the original goal of completing the new Jefferson County Sheriff's Office and Criminal Justice Center by the spring of 2023 passes, County Council was reaffirmed this week that the project is going to take longer to finish and there's uncertainty on what additional costs will be incurred with the facility.

The county broke ground on the 300-bed, $45 million jail, located at 1150 J.A. Berry Lane, in July 2021 with hopes of having the facility finished in less than two years.

The county still does not have an actual date for the jail's completion, the Council was told Tuesday.

County Sheriff Ben Flint and Chief Deputy Laura Pickel were at Tuesday's County Council meeting to seek approval for additional appropriations to cover higher jail expenses the department has see far this year. Pickel said the county is venturing into new territory with the new jail.

"We still don't know the cost of running the (new) facility. We have no idea. It was never given to us," said Pickel.

She said the county is already paying for water at the new jail but since the jail is currently not in use that cost is minimal. However, she noted that current water usage "doesn't even give us a ballpark as to what we're actually going to spend" once the jail is in operation. "I have no idea what that looks like" and JCSO probably won't know that amount until the new jail has been functioning for a couple of months, and a pattern has developed for daily water and electricity usage.

Pickel said she has "pretty good numbers for what the medical will be in the new facility and what food will be in the new facility" but the utilities won't be known until later in the year, which will make it challenging for the County Council when it begins planning the 2024 budget in August.

Hanover tennis court bids higher than estimates

Garrett: Help from schools may cover extra cost

BY BOB DEMAREE

Plans to refurbish the tennis courts at Hanover Community Park moved a step closer to beginning with the opening of bids for that project on Monday.

The only bid received was received was from Tennis Technology Inc., of Louisville, at a cost of $216,114.

The bid was taken under advisement by the Hanover Town Council until their attorney, Devon Sharpe, reviews the offer to be certain all requirements are met. The council, which met in a special session for the bid opening, will hold its regular meeting on Tuesday when action could take place to either accept or deny the bid and award the contract.

Emergency drill planned for Saturday in Hanover

Local emergency responders will participate in a drill Saturday in Hanover in order to test and improve the community's overall preparedness for emergency events.

The drill, which will begin at 9 a.m., will simulate a chemical release from a truck delivering goods to Hanover College.

Troy Morgan, director of Jefferson County Emergency Management Agency, emphasized that the drill will be staged to look real but it is a simulation only and there will be no threat to the public. The actions of first responders and activities during the exercise will be practiced in a manner that is as realistic as possible with local police, fire and EMS responding as well as the hospital and health department participating.

CHARLIE'S BEAT

'Knotts' to play tonight at Red Bike

CHARLIE ROHLFING
CHARLIE'S BEAT

Jordan Antoine Wilson is front man for one of Madison's favorite bands, The Jordan Wilson Coalition. He plays around town quite often, even more now that he has moved to downtown Madison, as opposed to Carrollton or Cincinnati or Louisville where he's lived in the past.

But those of us who follow Jordan on Facebook or Instagram knew that he also has a frequent side gig up in Cincinnati, playing lead guitar for an indie-pop band called Knotts. We'd see him in the back of the photo as Knott's was winning this award or that honor, or playing at some high-profile venue. It's like he had a secret alter-ego.

So when Jordan suggested that Knotts should come and play a show at Red Bicycle Hall, it seemed like the perfect way to finally merge the rock/blues Jordan we know, with the indie/pop Jordan of Cincy fame. Knotts is playing tonight (May 12) at Red Bike at 8 p.m., with Jordan's band opening. Tickets are at MadTixEvents.com or available at the door.

I caught up with the driving force behind the band, Adalia Boehne, as she was driving to Michigan, her home state. "We're very excited to be playing in Madison," said Adalia. "We've heard so much about it from Jordan over the years. Plus, we are introducing a new direction with Knotts, and I'm anxious to share it with new audiences.

"We used to be pretty much straight indie/pop, but now we are leaning into the soul sound and R&B a lot more. It's a fun, dancey change for us. And people have been responding well to it.

"It's like we are making the most of everybody's best talent in the band now. Jordan with his bluesy style. Isaiah Cook our drummer, with his church and gospel background. And Antoine is steeped in the R&B and soul traditions.

A vehicle that was allegedly speeding on Main Street led to a traffic stop Sunday that resulted in two narcotics-related arrests by Madison Police Department.

MPD Officer Graham Heffelfinger executed the stop in the 700 block of West Main Street during which a registration check of the vehicle's license plate found the tag to be false and fictitious.

Capt. Rick Mundt and his K9 partner, Zimo, responded to the stop for an open air sniff around the exterior of the vehicle. The dog gave a positive indication for the presence of narcotics and officers conducted a probable cause search that located alleged narcotics in the vehicle.

Two occupants of the vehicle, Chelse Renee Crittenden, 25, Madison, and Brittany Dawn Calopietro, 32, Hanover, were arrested and lodged in the Jefferson County Jail.

Today's Highlight in History:

On May 12, 1949, the Soviet Union lifted the Berlin Blockade, which the Western powers had succeeded in circumventing with their Berlin Airlift.

On this date:

In 1780, during the Revolutionary War, the besieged city of Charleston, South Carolina, surrendered to British forces.

In 1932, the body of Charles Lindbergh Jr., the 20-month-old kidnapped son of Charles and Anne Lindbergh, was found in a wooded area near Hopewell, New Jersey.

In 1933, the Federal Emergency Relief Administration and the Agricultural Adjustment Administration were established to provide help for the needy and farmers.

In 1943, during World War II, Axis forces in North Africa surrendered. The two-week Trident Conference, headed by President Franklin D. Roosevelt and British Prime Minister Winston Churchill, opened in Washington.

In 1958, the United States and Canada signed an agreement to create the North American Air Defense Command (later the North American Aerospace Defense Command, or NORAD).

In 1975, the White House announced the new Cambodian government had seized an American merchant ship, the Mayaguez, in international waters. (U.S. Marines gained control of the ship three days after its seizure, not knowing the 39 civilian members of the crew had already been released by Cambodia.)

In 1982, in Fatima, Portugal, security guards overpowered a Spanish priest armed with a bayonet who attacked Pope John Paul II. (In 2008, the pope's longtime private secretary revealed that the pontiff was slightly wounded in the assault.)

In 1986, the military action-drama film "Top Gun," starring Tom Cruise and Kelly McGillis and released by Paramount Pictures, had its world premiere in New York.

In 2008, a devastating 7.9 magnitude earthquake in China's Sichuan province left more than 87,000 people dead or missing.

In 2009, five Miami men were convicted in a plot to blow up FBI buildings and Chicago's Sears Tower; one man was acquitted. Suspected Nazi death camp guard John Demjanjuk was deported from the United States to Germany. (On this date in 2011, Demjanjuk, who maintained his innocence, would be convicted by a German court of being an accessory to the murder of tens of thousands of Jews; he died in March 2012 at age 91.)

In 2011, CEOs of the five largest oil companies went before the Senate Finance Committee, where Democrats challenged the executives to justify tax breaks at a time when people were paying $4 a gallon for gas.

Ten years ago: Pope Francis gave the Catholic Church new saints, including hundreds of 15th-century martyrs who were beheaded for refusing to convert to Islam, as he led his first canonization ceremony before tens of thousands of people in St. Peter's Square.

Five years ago: North Korea said it would dismantle its nuclear test site later in the month, in what analysts described as a mostly symbolic event that wouldn't represent a material step toward denuclearization.

One year ago: Finland's leaders came out in favor of applying to join NATO in part of a historic realignment on the continent 2 1/2 months after Russian President Vladimir Putin's invasion of Ukraine sent a shiver of fear through Moscow's neighbors.

Rising Trend of Older Workers in the Workforce A Global Phenomenon

"Layin' it on the line"

By Stephen Dybwad
Retirement Planning/ Wealth Management

As the world's population ages, the number of older workers in the workforce is also increasing. This trend presents several economic challenges that need to be addressed, including financial insecurity and limited access to retirement savings. This article will examine the factors contributing to the rise of older workers and the solutions available, including safe money retirement investments like annuities.

According to the United Nations, the world's population is projected to grow to 9.7 billion by 2050, with the number of people aged 60 and over expected to double from 1 billion to 2 billion. This trend results from several factors, including advances in medical technology, improvements in public health, and declining birth rates.

One of the most significant implications of this demographic shift is the increasing number of older workers in the workforce. Many older adults find it difficult to retire comfortably due to inadequate savings, insufficient pension benefits, and the high cost of healthcare. In many countries, the retirement age has been raised, and the pension system is under pressure due to the rising number of retirees.

Another factor contributing to the increase in older workers is the changing nature of work. As the economy has shifted towards a knowledge-based and service-based model, there is less physical labor involved in many jobs, which means that older workers can continue working beyond the traditional retirement age. Additionally, many older workers stay in the workforce for social reasons, as work provides a sense of purpose, camaraderie, and mental stimulation.

However, this trend of older workers in the workforce presents several economic challenges that need to be addressed. One of the most significant challenges is financial insecurity. Many older workers are not adequately prepared for retirement, with a considerable portion of the population having little to no retirement savings. This lack of financial security can lead to higher poverty levels, healthcare costs, and increased dependence on social welfare programs.

Another challenge is the limited access to retirement savings. Many employers do not offer retirement plans to their employees, leaving workers to rely solely on Social Security benefits. The high cost of healthcare can also be a significant financial burden on older adults, particularly those not yet eligible for Medicare.

One solution to these challenges is encouraging safe retirement investments like annuities. An annuity is a financial product that provides a steady income stream in exchange for a lump-sum payment or periodic payments over time. Annuities offer several advantages, including tax-deferred growth, guaranteed income, and protection against market volatility.

By investing in an annuity, older adults can secure a reliable source of income in retirement, providing financial stability and peace of mind. Annuities benefit those concerned about outliving their savings, as they offer guaranteed income for life.

Another advantage of annuities is that they may protect against market volatility. In turbulent economic times, many traditional retirement investments, such as stocks and bonds, can lose value rapidly. On the other hand, certain annuities provide a fixed rate of return regardless of market conditions.

The world's aging population presents several economic challenges that need to be addressed, including financial insecurity and limited access to retirement savings. As the trend of older workers in the workforce continues to rise, all individuals must have access to the resources and support they need to retire comfortably and with financial security. Safe money retirement investments like annuities may provide a solution, offering a reliable source of income in retirement and protection against market volatility.

- The aging population creates a unique set of challenges for retirement.
- As the economy has shifted towards a knowledge-based and service-based model, there is less physical labor involved in many jobs, which means that older workers can continue working beyond the traditional retirement age.
- Changes in the economy have increased potential issues for retirement income sustainability and highlighted the need for safe income investments.
- Certain annuities may offer advantages for the safety.

"We've been on kind of a roll for a couple of years now. We won Best New Artist at the Cincy Entertainment Awards a few years ago. We had a song included in the NPR Tiny Desk Concert series. And we recently opened for the band Thundercat, which was very exciting.

"Our first album came out in 2018, right before the pandemic. Now that things are settling down again, we've been able to record our sophomore album, titled Ribbon Dancer. That's what we are out promoting now with this series of new concerts, and we'll feature a lot from it when we play at Red Bicycle Hall."

I asked Adalia what people can expect if they come out on Friday to see the show. "Well, it's basically an electric torrent of emotion. I'm really into emotive songwriting and getting people to feel something. And with our new soulful direction, people will also feel like moving their shoulders and getting into the flow of the sound. It's definitely our goal to bring people into the vibe and make the crowd part of the experience. It will be a fun show, I'll just say that."

HOT TIP OF THE WEEK

The Riverboat Inn is now under new ownership. (And on that note, we should all give a big "Thank You" to previous owner Kathie Petkovic for supporting live music at her venue for many years.) The new owners are equally supportive, and they have already hosted numerous live music events as they reopen and get rolling this spring. They have shows Friday and Saturday this week, and all their shows are 7 p.m. to 10 p.m. Go check them out. The other venue under new ownership is the Lighthouse down on the river, and they are all-in with live music, too. Go down there Saturday night, listen to the music, and see all the improvements they've made. If you are downtown this weekend from 2 p.m. to 5 p.m., you'll notice street musicians (buskers) in front of several stores. It's all part of living in a genuine Music City! Oh, and be sure to tip the players.

Because of higher costs so far this year, the Council approved an additional $25,000 in the jail's medical/hospital budget and $160,000 for use of jail facilities (the fee to house inmates in other jails) and $190,000 to cover the medical contract for the new jails.

Pickel said there was $25,000 in the 2023 budget for medical/hospital expenses, but there were unexpected bills at the beginning of the year so, as of May 4, only $1,797 remained in that account. To ensure there is sufficient funds in the account for the rest of the year, the Council approved a transfer of $25,000 from the county's general fund to the jail's medical/hospital budget.

Pickel said the new medical contract will be $378,600 once the move is made to the new facility, which comes to $31,555 per month making the medical request at $190,000 to have enough funds to cover the last six months of the year.

Pickel said $210,000 was originally budgeted to house inmates in other jails due to Jefferson County's insufficient space at the current Jefferson County Jail. "In January alone, we spent $59,000," she said. With the extended date of completion for the new jail, she said "we're pretty sure we're going to run out of that money" since currently only $37,787 is left in that account.

She noted the Sheriff's Department has had no control over the budget spent to house inmates in other facilities. "It's not like we're sending people out because we want to. We don't have a choice. We're above capacity," she said.

With an additional $160,000, Pickel hopes that will provide enough funds to last through July with hopes that they may be in the new jail by then.

Flint noted that once the new jail opens the county won't have the expense of housing inmates in other counties because there will be adequate space for all county inmates. The only exception will be if the county has to incarcerate an inmate who cannot be safely house with other local inmates.

At the same time, Flint said the county "will be drastically increasing the amount of inmates" in the county jail that will no longer be housed in other county jails.

Flint, who took office as sheriff in January, said he doesn't think enough considerations were made last year to plan for new costs that are now showing up in this year's sheriff's department budget.

"We understand you didn't make the budget for this year," said council member Ray Denning.

In other business:

- Approved an appropriation of $5,000 to buy two AEDs (Automated External Defibrillator) that will be available in time for the Jefferson County 4-H Fair scheduled for July 7-14. Jefferson County Emergency Management Agency Director Troy Morgan said a work group identified 30 AEDs could be utilized at the county's governmental buildings but recommended that only the two be purchased now, and then consider whether to purchase more AEDs in the future. Morgan said the cost for the AEDS is approximately $2,000 along with a $199 annual maintenance agreement. County Commissioner Bobby Little recommended including the maintenance agreement for liability reasons.
- Flint announced plans to purchase a new K9 for the sheriff's department with a $10,000 grant from the American Kennel Club and a $5,000 donation from Jefferson County Prosecutor David Sutter. "That will hopefully help us get out and address the drug issue that we're trying to be proactive about. Deputy Logan Gray will be the handler of the dog which Flint said is still completing training. Flint said the department currently has two K9 units and this will be the third.
- Agreed to allow for an update in the salary ordinance for the County Highway Department to add a garage foreman, a position that had existed in the past and is being brought back. In order to fund that position for the rest of the year, County Highway Superintendent Bobby Phillips asked for a transfer of $31,000 that was approved.
- Gave permission to move the County Auditor, County Treasurer and Human Resources departments to a new financial software with a three-year contract to Low Associates, a government software company based in South Bend. The conversion to the new software is expected to take place by the end of the year.

"We're working with a dinosaur right now," County Auditor Heather Huff said of the current software. She noted the new software is more up-to-date and will be easier to utilize. The Commissioners will have the contract on their agenda for final approval at the May 18 meeting.

- Agreed to appoint Sally Wurtz for a final term as the County Council's representative on the Jefferson County Public Library's board of trustee. Her current term ends June 30 with the new term ending June 30, 2027, which will be her fourth and final term on the board.

TENNIS

The tennis court refurbishment is part of the park improvements being funded by a $574,412 Land and Water Conservation Fund Grant through the Indiana Department of Natural Resources. The grant provides for a 50% match by the town, meaning the town will contribute $287,206 and the National Park Service $287,206.

Last week, Rick Schnebelt, who has been overseeing the grant projects for the park, estimated the tennis court refurbishment would cost about $190,000. Knowing that, town council members Debbie Kroger, Treva Shelton and Benjamin Sommer, who were in attendance at Monday's bid opening, expressed concern that Tennis Technology's $216,114 bid is more than the town's available funding.

However, based on a later discussions with town council member Kenny Garrett, he reminded that the Southwestern Jefferson County Schools board of trustees had agreed to contribute $30,000 for net posts, nets and fencing because the court are utilized by the school's tennis teams. Garrett said the $30,000 from the schools combined with the $190,000 the city anticipate, could provide enough funds for the tennis courts to be refurbished.

Other projects that are being funded by the grant include lighting for the park's baseball/softball fields and tennis court, new storage/officials buildings and new walking trails.

DRILL

Morgan stated the areas in the Hanover area where the exercise will take place will be clearly marked. For safety reasons, and in order to complete the exercise in a realistic environment, the exercise area will not be open to the public.

"We ask for your patience and support if the exercise disrupts your daily routine and inconveniences you in any way. We thank all area residents for their support of this important exercise." Morgan said.

Anyone with concerns should contact Morgan at 812-265-7616 or troy.morgan@jeffersoncounty.in.gov.

Regatta, H1 at odds over live streaming rights

BY DAVID CAMPBELL

A dispute over who holds the rights to live streaming has kept the Madison Regatta from signing its contract with H1 Unlimited, less than two months until the event is contested on the Ohio River.

At issue is whether the Madison Regatta receives any compensation from H1, which has live-streamed the Unlimited hydroplane race on its YouTube channel for the past several years. H1 Unlimited does not charge for the service, but Regatta officials are concerned that the free streaming is cutting into their ability to sell tickets.

Madison Regatta Vice-President Kyle Bipes said that while he doesn't expect the dispute to keep the big boats from coming to Madison this summer, it is definitely an issue that the organization wants to address in the near future.

"My thinking is that, right now, it's probably too late to do anything about it. But this is something that we want to push," Bipes said. "We have no idea of what the effect (of live streaming is), but it is something that is a concern. We don't know how many people are just opting to stay at home and watch it on TV rather than coming down to the riverfront."

Madison Regatta would like H1 to possibly consider charging for the service on a pay-per-view basis, and split the money with the race sites. In lieu of that, the Regatta would like to see some compensation from H1 to make up for the potential lost revenue.

"If it costs us $10,000 (in ticket sales), then maybe next year we tell H1 that we're going to give them $150,000 instead of $160,000," Bipes said. "Again, we don't know what the true effect is, but I don't think it's something that has been truly looked at."

Madison Regatta already has contracts in place with both Grand Prix America and the Pro-Lite Series to bring those two series to Madison this summer. And Bipes is 100% sure that the big H1 boats will be there as well.

"We all know that the big boats are the show and we want them to be there and they'll be there," Bipes said. "But we also know that some things need to be looked at."

With less than 50 days before the start of the Madison Regatta Festival, organizers are ready to move forward with only a few wrinkles left to iron out.

As of Wednesday, Madison Regatta has sold 2,944 tickets — nearly matching the total amount of presale tickets sold a year ago — and those sales have amounted to roughly $193,000 in revenue. The event's RV spots are sold out and tarp spaces are 75% sold out.

Applications for all scholarship pageants are posted on the Regatta's website, www.madisonregatta.com. The City of Madison is coordinating the parade and all parade signups should go through the city.

The next general membership meeting of Madison Regatta Inc. will be on June 8 at the Fairfield Inn beginning at 6:30 p.m.

Today's Puzzle Solved

Rekindled romance has everything except passion

AMY DICKINSON
ASK AMY

Dear Amy: I am a 65-year-old woman. I rekindled a relationship with a man I have known for over 50 years. He and I dated briefly (for six months) six years ago, and I was totally into him.

We stopped seeing each other because he was financially irresponsible. I could not see myself paying for everything with no help from him.

Fast-forward to 2022. He reached out to me. He's still single, I am single, so we decided to try this again, this time with my eyes open and asking questions.

I moved to my family home, made renovations, and my financial situation is good because I don't have a mortgage.

He lives in an apartment, but is planning to move closer to me.

We are heading into seven months of this reconnect, and I am very happy and content with him, but I am not sexually attracted to him.

We hold hands and kiss, but there is no sexual passion.

We sleep in the same bed. I feel like he is a very good friend and I want him to be with me forever, but I feel guilty because of the lack of sexual intimacy.

I enjoy sex and want to have it in my life.

I feel I am being very selfish holding onto him, knowing that there is no passion.

What should I do? — Not Feeling It

Dear Not Feeling It: It sounds as if you are in good shape, in terms of your life choices and lifestyle.

You don't mention whether your guy's negative characteristics that led you to reject him several years ago have changed at all.

My theory is that in your previous relationship with him, you were temporarily blinded by the hotness.

Now — your eyes are very much open, and the walls you built that drove you to reject him previously are still up.

Sexual compatibility is all about trust and abandon, and although you like and love this guy, the trust isn't there.

To answer your question, yes, it is selfish of you to be in a romantic relationship without disclosing what's really going on with you.

In-law is riled over handicap parking permit

AMY DICKINSON
ASK AMY

Dear Amy: I have been happily married for 39 years. The few "disagreements" we've had always seem to center around my husband's family.

The latest has to do with my brother-in-law. He has always had a very entitled attitude.

When my mother-in-law passed away in 2020, the car she recently bought was taken over by him. I was fine with that. However, she also had a handicap parking permit that was issued to her by the state of New York due to her deteriorating health issues. My husband's brother has chosen to use that permit illegally for the past two years. I have always suspected the fraud but didn't want to accuse him and cause problems in the event that he had gotten his own permit.

This past week he left the area to visit another relative and his car was left in our driveway while he was away.

After checking the tag through the window, I confirmed that he has been illegally using my mother-in-law's handicap permit tag.

Not knowing where the keys to the vehicle were, I asked my husband to please remove the permit from his brother's vehicle.

My husband refused, saying he didn't feel he had the right to remove something from someone's vehicle without their permission.

I felt my husband is enabling him to continue this abuse. I am disappointed and have lost a lot of respect for my husband, who I love dearly, over this. I'd appreciate your opinion as to whether I am overreacting in this matter. — Annoyed!

Dear Annoyed!: I can understand why you are so annoyed by your brother-in-law's choice to use his late-mother's handicap permit, but I agree with your husband that it is not his place to remove it.

I do believe you are overreacting to this, but I assume that this episode is a placeholder for other in-law annoyances you've experienced over the years.

Furthermore, you are blaming the wrong person for this! Your husband is refusing to do something you have told him to do. He has the right to discern and make choices based on his own values; and in this case I happen to agree with him.

ASTROLOGY

ARIES (March 21-April 19) — Keep drilling away and do not let up. It may be tiring to continue with a project, but if you change anything now, you could end up losing money. This is not a suitable time to make impulsive changes or dive into a new project.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) — Get your mojo back into high gear. Your intuition about the risks associated with investments can keep you out of trouble. Remain alert and you may sidestep a potential argument or help someone else avoid one.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) — You might feel vulnerable and worry about exposing your imperfections or flaws. It could be difficult to communicate clearly with a companion who is changeable and may bounce between being logical and fanciful.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) — Prove that you can be deserving of someone's high opinion. Your sympathy toward those with problems could make you the "go to" person. Your compassionate nature and kindly demeanor may win you some new supporters.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) — You might be cool and collected about financial affairs. However, it is best to ignore the urge to stir things up or you might be faced with unsatisfactory results. Be polite because rudeness or brash actions could invite criticism.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) — You intuitively know the right thing to say or do to make someone trust you. Use business expertise to negotiate better terms. Nevertheless, this is not the best time to sign a contract or make a key investment.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) — Give someone the benefit of the doubt. You can be productive this weekend if you avoid misunderstandings and put your best foot forward. Outside pressures may trigger a misunderstanding or cause a rift with a partner.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) — Remain supportive of loved ones through thick and thin. Impulsive shopping sprees where you could be tempted to be extravagant should be avoided for now. Remember to express appreciation for favors.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) — Get to the bottom of a puzzling predicament. Bewildering situations can be sorted out if you employ a few investigative techniques. You may spot something that triggers your interest in luxurious possessions.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) — This is not the time to take a family member's assistance for granted. Be sure to make a polite request and keep energy balanced. Put your business ambitions on the backburner and spend time with a romantic partner.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) — There could be a standoff if someone insists on instant gratification of their desires. You may grow defensive about spending your money because you are well aware of your obligations and a stringent budget.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) — A friend might lead you out of self-imposed isolation if a job or responsibilities have kept you on a strict schedule with little room for carefree fun. Give yourself permission to break free for a few hours.

ASTROLOGY

ARIES (March 21-April 19) — Maintain a low profile. Sure, you miss the applause and being the center of attention, but it could be time to guard your reputation. Avoid giving in to sudden whims or signing contracts that could tie up your funds.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) — Mind your own business. Keep your head down and prove yourself rather than defending yourself. People could be working a cross purposes this weekend so you must do your best to avoid misunderstandings.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) — An apology may need to be given to move things along. Maybe you were too wrapped up in your own thoughts and missed doing something. It is time to clear up confusion caused by crossed lines and mixed-up communications.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) — You may be on the same wavelength as a companion when you are actively doing something constructive. A romantic dinner for two, however, might not prove to be quite as satisfying. Save romance for another night.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) — Offering an apology if you have overstepped the mark is one way to mend fences. Being honest about joint resources is another way to show you care about someone. Promote peace and understanding within the family.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) — Make sure you are up to the task. Whether you are handling a household duty, working a side gig or vegging out on the couch, someone could be rating your performance. Clear up any misunderstandings quickly.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) — You can be better off if you work behind the scenes rather than standing in the spotlight. You may have a great business plan, but this is not the best time to share your precious ideas with a partner or loved one.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) — There is safety in numbers. This can be a good time to hold a family discussion or gather ideas to present to colleagues. It may be easy to understand the basic problems and even easier to find amiable solutions.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) — You may meet someone who instills trust instantly. A confidential conversation could spark new interests or help you brainstorm tactics for a powerful agenda. Present ideas in a favorable and flattering way.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) — You could have someone close who will be happy to hold your hand as you explore new vistas and work toward achieving your dreams. Do not be shy about reaching out and helping yourself to well-deserved rewards.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) — One secret to success is understanding when to be content with what you already have. Set some boundaries that can rob discontent of its ability to cause stress. Step toward long term goals with each short-term accomplishment.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) — Read between the lines; the truth may be stretched thin to suit someone else's agenda. Avoid asking for promises or commitments because someone is unlikely to follow through. You can do far better as a solo act today.

Madison to face New Albany in volleyball sectional

BY THE COURIER STAFF

Madison will face off against New Albany in the semifinals of the Boys Volleyball Sectional Tournament at Jeffersonville on Saturday.

This year marks the first time that Madison has fielded a team in boys volleyball. Although not currently an IHSAA-sanctioned sport, boys volleyball is listed by the IHSAA as an "emerging sport" with many observers predicting it will be fully sanctioned within the next few years.

Madison is part of a five-team sectional that will be contested in a one-day tourney.

Scottsburg will take on Silver Creek in the opening round at 10 a.m. with Madison playing New Albany at 11:30 a.m.

The Scottsburg-Silver Creek winner will face Jeffersonville in the second semifinal at 1:30 p.m. with the championship set for 4:30 p.m.

Southwestern for the first time also fielded a team in boys volleyball this season but the Rebels scheduled only three matches and are aiming to compete in the sectional tournament next season.

Cost of the admission is $10 (cash only) and includes all sessions.

As legalized gambling becomes pervasive, NCAA rules remain strict

BY RALPH D. RUSSO
AP COLLEGE SPORTS WRITER

More than 40 athletes from Iowa and Iowa State could be facing discipline from both law enforcement and the NCAA for impermissible online wagering.

The NCAA consequences could be far worse than the legal ones.

While the penalty for betting on sporting events in the state of Iowa for individuals under the age of 21 is a fine of $645, a college athlete could be sidelined for most of a season because of NCAA rules.

Five years since a Supreme Court decision paved the way for states to legalize betting on sporting events, more than half have done so. As legal gambling on games has become pervasive, NCAA rules prohibiting it remain strict and college sports leaders are cautious about dialing them back.

Tulane athletic director Troy Dannen said decision-makers should always be open to modernizing NCAA bylaws to reflect changing societal norms. He cited how marijuana-usage rules were relaxed to reflect more permissive laws in recent years.

"But the fact that it's legal doesn't mean it should be acceptable if you are a student-athlete," he said.

Earlier this week, Iowa and Iowa State acknowledged they are cooperating with both local gaming regulators, law enforcement and the NCAA after in an investigation of gambling activities revealed potential involvement by athletes in multiple sports.

That came on the heels of Alabama firing its baseball coach amid an investigation by gaming authorities of suspicious bets placed in Ohio on one of its team's games.

In the Alabama case, no athletes are suspected to be involved. In the Iowa case, some Hawkeyes baseball players have already been sidelined from competition, which is routine when a school believes the eligibility of an athlete may have been compromised.

The Iowa director of gaming told The Associated Press earlier this week that no evidence indicates match fixing or suspicious wagering activity in games involving the Hawkeyes or Cyclones.

NCAA rules prohibit athletes, coaches and staff from betting on sports in which the NCAA conducts a championship. For example, athletes aren't allowed to legally place bets on NFL or games or pro golf. Even participation in a March Madness bracket pool with stakes is prohibited.

College athletes can bet on horse racing where it is legal and gamble in casinos if they are of legal age, but NCAA rules against legal wagering are stricter than most professional leagues. The appetite to ease them might be low.

"It would be a major mistake to change NCAA rules regarding gambling if it negatively impacts the integrity of games," Atlantic Coast Conference Commissioner Jim Phillips told AP via text message.

Dannen said he had not seen anything introduced in the governance process that would loosen the NCAA rules, while Ohio athletic director Julie Cromer had a simple summation.

"It's different to be a competitor than to be a consumer of sports," said Cromer, who co-chaired the NCAA's Division I transformation committee last year.

The most high-profile recent case involving an athlete being punished for otherwise legal gambling came last year at Virginia Tech. Football player Alan Tisdale was suspended six games — half a season — for betting on NBA games. Tisdale self-reported the bets to Virginia Tech officials, and initially received a nine-game suspension from the NCAA before it was reduced after a Virginia Tech appeal.

NCAA rules prohibit athletes, coaches and staff from betting on sports in which the NCAA conducts a championship. For example, athletes aren't allowed to legally place bets on NFL or games or pro golf. Even participation in a March Madness bracket pool with stakes is prohibited.

Iowa State said football players, wrestlers and track and field athletes were among the 15 identified in the state's probe. Iowa said it had received information about 26 athletes from baseball, football, wrestling, men's basketball and men's track and field teams.

The twin gambling scandals come at a time when college sports and the NCAA are in a tumultuous period of transition, facing legal and political pressure over how athletes can be treated and compensated.

Modernization has been a buzzword among administrators as the NCAA looks to reform its outdated amateurism model and deregulate.

But making it more permissible for athletes to legally wager doesn't fall under the umbrella of athlete benefits, said Dannen, who was also a member of the D-I transformation committee.

"Because there is a scandal or two should we change the rules to permit what is currently scandalous?" he said. "That doesn't seem to be the right reason to change a rule."

Derby winner Mage on track to run Preakness, pursue Triple Crown

BY STEPHEN WHYNO
ASSOCIATED PRESS

Kentucky Derby winner Mage remains on track to run in the Preakness Stakes in Baltimore next week and resume the chase for horse racing's first Triple Crown since Justify in 2018, with a final decision expected Friday.

Ramiro Restrepo, part of the ownership group, said Thursday those in charge of deciding Mage's next race wanted to see one final workout before making that determination.

"Everything is just patience and temperance on our end," Restrepo said on a conference call with reporters. "The plan is that if on Friday he trains satisfactory like he's been training all week, then we would make the announcement that we would go to the Preakness."

Mage would be the first unquestioned Derby winner to go to the Preakness with a chance to win the Triple Crown since Justify five years ago.

In 2019, Maximum Security was disqualified and Country House elevated to first with neither running in the Preakness; in 2020, the Belmont Stakes was run first because of the pandemic; in 2021, Medina Spirit failed a drug test after winning the Derby and was eventually DQed; and in 2022, the owner and trainer of long shot Rich Strike decided to skip the race.

While the two weeks between the Derby and Preakness make for an unusually tight turnaround for top thoroughbreds in North America, Restrepo downplayed that concern, citing trainer Gustavo Delgado's experience.

"He's won two (Venezuelan) Triple Crowns with similar timeframes, so as far as being prepared and being able to know all the things that Mage needs to check off the list to be able to participate his best for the Preakness, we have that in play and we're quite comfortable with it," Restrepo said.

Logistical preparations are already underway to get Mage from Churchill Downs in Louisville, Kentucky, to Pimlico Racecourse in Baltimore.

Restrepo said he and the other owners will make the best decision for the lightly raced colt with only four career starts.

Chase Chamberlin, co-founder and head of racing for Commonwealth, a consortium that like Restrepo owns a 25% stake in Mage, echoed the sentiment of putting the horse first and defended Delgado for not committing to the Preakness right away.

Mage won the Derby at odds of 15-1 after a tumultuous 10-day stretch at Churchill Downs during which seven horses died and five were scratched from the $3 million race, leaving a field of 18 to run instead of the usual 20.

Forte, the morning line favorite, was scratched hours before by Kentucky Horse Racing Commission veterinarians who had concerns about a bruised right front foot. Kentucky racing officials put him on a mandatory 14-day veterinary list earlier this week, and on Thursday trainer Todd Pletcher was suspended 10 days by New York officials for Forte's positive drug test in September, ruling out any slim chance of the horse running in the Preakness.

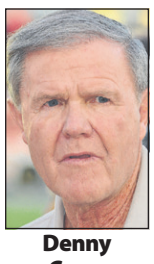
Crum, who coached Louisville to 2 NCAA titles, dies

BY GARY B. GRAVES
ASSOCIATED PRESS

LOUISVILLE — Denny Crum took everything he learned from legendary UCLA coach John Wooden, added his own touch and built his own sparkling legacy at Louisville.



Denny Crum

Crum, who won two NCAA basketball championships and built the Cardinals into one of the 1980s' dominant programs during a Hall of Fame coaching career, died Tuesday. He was 86.

The school announced Crum's death in a release after being informed by his wife, Susan. No cause was given, but Crum had battled an extended illness. He had a mild stroke in August 2017 while fishing in Alaska and another two years ago.

Nicknamed "Cool Hand Luke" because of his cool, unflinching sideline demeanor — legend has it he never uttered a curse word — Crum retired in March 2001 after 30 seasons at Louisville with 675 victories, which ranked 15th all-time then, and championships in 1980 and '86. A disciple of the legendary Wooden, Crum often wore a red sport coat and waved a rolled-up program and stat sheet like a bandleader's baton as he directed Louisville to 23 NCAA Tournaments and six Final Fours.

The second half of his tenure was not nearly as successful as the first, however, as Louisville endured two separate NCAA investigations and never returned to the Final Four after Crum's second championship season. He accepted a $7 million buyout in March 2, 2001 — his 64th birthday — and was replaced by Rick Pitino, an eventual Hall of Famer who guided Louisville to a third NCAA title in 2013 that the governing body later vacated following a sex scandal.

Nonetheless, Crum was inducted into the Hall of Fame in May 1994, with Wooden, his college coach and longtime mentor at his side. Crum had 11 more overall wins and 55 more than his most influential adviser amassed at UCLA.

UCLA mourned Crum in a release that noted his 1990 induction into its athletics Hall of Fame and achievements as a Bruins player and coach.

Crum remained a beloved, revered and respected presence around Louisville whose legacy has been recognized in many ways. He frequently attended Cardinals games played on the KFC Yum! Center home court bearing his name and signature. And Crum was present for the September 2022 dedication of Denny Crum Hall, a new campus dormitory for athletes and students.

"You try to remember all of the things that you did, things that happened," Crum said at a February 2020 ceremony honoring the 1980 title team. "Some was bad, but most of it good. It just makes you really proud that you were a part of it."

Crum had a front-row seat in March 2022 for the introduction of one of his former players, Kenny Payne, as Cardinals coach. There were plenty of the Hall of Famer's other pupils present to not only support Payne, but enjoy another meeting with their mentor and friend on and off the court.

Payne expressed prayers for Crum's family and called his former coach a true treasure who gave so much to the school and community.

"Today is a sad day for me personally, as well as the basketball world," Payne said in a statement. "My thoughts go through all the lessons that he taught, not just to me, but every player he ever came in contact with. ... Rest in peace, Coach. You touched so many. Well done."

Former Cardinals great Junior Bridgeman echoed Payne on Crum's impact on generations of players.

"He said if you are good at what you're going to do, we're not going to worry about what the other team is going to do," said Bridgeman, who played for Crum from 1972-75. "That's a life lesson that'll carry you farther and in whatever area you go into."

A native of San Fernando, California, Crum played guard for two seasons at Los Angeles' Pierce Junior College before transferring to UCLA in 1956.

The Bruins went 38-14 in Crum's two seasons as a player.

He briefly served as a graduate assistant to Wooden before coaching Pierce in the mid-1960s.

Wooden hired Crum as his assistant and chief recruiter in 1968, when the Bruins were in the midst of their dynastic run to 10 NCAA championships. Crum is credited with luring Bill Walton to UCLA, and the Bruins went 86-4 and won three NCAA titles during Crum's three seasons there.

Crum succeeded John Dromo as Louisville's coach on April 17, 1971, but Wooden figured his former assistant would soon return to succeed him.

"Denny was so good that I knew I wasn't going to keep him very long," Wooden told the Courier Journal of Louisville back then. "I was pleased when he got the job at Louisville. I had always hoped when I retired that he'd be the one to succeed me, but he left and proved to be just what I thought he was."

Louisville had enjoyed little postseason success before Crum's arrival, reaching the 1956 NIT championship and the 1959 NCAA Final Four. The Cardinals lost Crum's first game, 70-69 to Florida, before reeling off 15 consecutive victories.

They won the Missouri Valley Conference — the first of 15 regular-season league titles for Crum — then reached the Final Four, where they met Wooden and UCLA. The Bruins won 96-77 on their way to a sixth-straight championship.

The schools met again in the semifinals three seasons later with a similar result as UCLA won 75-74 in overtime. By then Crum employed much of Wooden's fundamentally focused style, but with pressure defense and a fast-breaking flair. Instead of an offense built around a dominant center, Crum used athletic guards and forwards who could finish plays with the high-flying dunks Wooden eschewed.

His philosophy made the Cardinals perennial NCAA Tournament participants with 20 or more wins each season from 1975-1979. Their breakthrough came in the 1979-80 season, when homegrown star guard Darrell Griffith and the so-called "Doctors of Dunk" marched through the regular season 26-3 and won their second Metro Conference championship in three years.

Tributes and condolences began pouring in, with U.S. Senate Republican leader Mitch McConnell of Kentucky saying, "The Cardinal community loved their coach and will miss his calm leadership both on and off the court."
